VOL. 5. NO. 11 — MONESSEN, PA., SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1906. — SIX CENTS THE WEEK

SURPRISE THE PASTOR.

Upon his Return From Vacation Finds Home in Possession of Congregation.

Last evening was a jolly one at the home of Rev. and Mrs. M. M. Albeck who arrived in Monessen on the 7.42 train after having spent a two weeks vacation with relatives at Worthington Pa. They proceeded at once to their home on First street where they found the house in darkness and seemingly as they left it but a grand surprise awaited them for as they entered and the lights were turned on they soon discovered that they were not the only occupants of the house. A number of the members of the St. Paul's Lutheran church of which Rev. Albeck is pastor, were masters of the situation.

A sumpteous dinner had been spread in the dining room and after the first surprise had somewhat passed off all repaired to the table where the season's delicacies were served and especially enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Albeck who were tired from the long trip home. Greatly refreshed when the dinner which was one long to be remembered was finished, the guests returned to the parlors where Rev. Albeck was presented with a handsome gold watch neatly engraved on the inner lid as follows: "Presented to our pastor, Rev. M. M. Albeck by St Paul's Lutheran congregation of Monessen Pa. July 6th, 1906." The present was made by members of the congregation who all assisted in its purchase Mrs. Albeck was also presented with a sum of money.

The presentation speech was made in a very able manner by D. I. Seifert and in a few well chosen words was responded to by both Rev. and Mrs. Albeck.

Music, songs and other appropriate amusements occupied the remainder of the evening. The guests leaving for the if homes feeling that they had spent a most pleasant evening.

A MEMORABLE SESSION.

Now that the noise and shouting have died out and the work of congress can be viewed in printers' ink, one fact stands out pre-eminent, and that is that the session just closed has been one of the most important and one of the busiest in the legislative history of the government.

At no previous session perhaps have so many great problems been decided. Not all have been up to the demands of the president and of the country at large, but action in most instances has been along the right liue, and any criticism of measures will be of degree rather than character. The rate bill, as an instance, was in accord with public sentiment, as far as it went, and is censured only because it failed to go the entire length and provide for a complete relief against existing abuses. It was action in the right direction, and for so much the country is duly thankful.

It would be interesting to read over President Roosevelt's last annual message and then to put down in parallel columns the problems that were recommended for solution and the work actually performed by congress. Such a comparison could not fail to convince even the most partisan democrat that the session has been a victory for the Roosevelt policy.

The record, therefore, is largely made up from the annual message and demonstrates what can be accomplished under the whip and spur of a strenuous president.

LOCAL corporations again are explaining to the city and country boards of equalization that the magnates need the money.

THE fact that the farm products trust is being organized by Wall street capitalists is ample evidence that the consumer will be the "farmer" class when the trouble starts.

"THE worst evils that effect our local government" says President Roosevelt, "arise from and are the inevitable result of mixing up of city affairs with party politics."

Too Rainy For a Wedding.

In Sutton a generation ago lived a man named Marsh He decided after due consideration to marry a young lady in an adjoining town The day was set, preparations were made for the wedding and the guests were assembled The appointed hour arrived and the bridegroom did not appear Another hour of waiting, and still he tarried The young lady's father became impatient "I'm going to hunt him up," he said. A half hour's drive brought him to the Marsh home

"Where is Frank?" he demanded.

"He went down cellar to pick over some potatoes, seeing it's so rainy," was the response

"What do you mean by not coming to the wedding?" demanded the irate prospective father-in-law of the tardy bridegroom.

"It rains so hard I thought you wouldn't have the wedding," Marsh replied, "but I'll fix up and ride back with you, seeing everybody's there."—Boston Herald.

Haeckel Visiting Darwin.

When the carriage drew up before Darwin's house, with its ivy and shadowy elms, the great scientist stepped out of the shade of the creeper covered porch to meet me He had a tall and venerable appearance, with the broad shoulders of an Atlas that bore a world of thought; a Jove-like forehead as we see in Goethe, with a lofty and broad vault deeply furrowed by the plow of intellectual work The tender and friendly eyes were overshadowed by the great roof of the prominent brows. The gentle mouth was framed in a long silvery white beard The noble expression of the whole face, the easy and soft voice, the slow and careful pronunciation the natural and simple tenor of his conversation, took my heart by storm in the first hour that we talked together, just as his great work had taken my intelligence by storm at the first reading I seemed to have before me a venerable sage of ancient Greece, a Socrates or an Aristotle—Described by Haeckel

A Snake That Swallows Eggs.

The hydrachyeti is a native of South Africa, and, taken all around, he is a curiosity in the reptile line. Unlike the regulation snake, he has no teeth in his mouth, but has a full set of grinders in his stomach These dental wonders grow from the center of each vertebra They pass through the walls of the stomach, and are each crowned with enamel Hydrachi is the champion egg sucker, and the teeth in the stomach appear to be nature's provision for breaking the shell of the egg without running the risk of losing the precious contents When the egg lands in the stomach and the serpent's instinct tells it that everything is all right, the abdominal walls contract, and the egg is crushed against the long row of vertebral teeth.

The Great Nerve Tonic

Read this letter

Gallen, Mich.

Gentlemen: I bought three bottles of your medicine from my druggist. The medicine rendered me very good service, but I am sorry to say that the druggists here are all sold out of your medicine. I should have bought six bottles instead of three. I will gladly take six bottles of the Nervine and Blood Tonic, and request that you write me, if you are able to read this, for I am rather old to write. I have suffered six years from NERVOUS TROUBLE, caused by a fall, and my whole body remained in a tremble, but no pain. Every doctor I consulted failed to help me, and I was compelled to give up all housework. Then I read your advertisement and bought your medicine, and almost immediately after commencing its use I was a new woman I hope you will write me at once, and tell me how much money I must send, as I am anxious to get to using your medicine again soon. With most hearty regards, I remain,

For no matter how swiftly she writes, she can see just what she's doing.

What Came of a Scullion

[Original.]

There was trouble on the mind of the chief cook of Signor Faliero, a wealthy Venetian gentleman living in France. Signor Faliero had invited a number of distinguished people to dinner. There were to be princes, nobles and merchants of Venice and, more important than all, a number of art critics. I say "more important than all" because that was an age when the fine arts flourished and a man who could judge of a painting or a statue was looked up to more than one possessing birth or wealth. At any rate, these men were of more intrinsic worth than all the rest at this dinner of the Venetian.

But what was amiss in the kitchen? A confectioner who had been charged with making a large candy ornament to decorate the table had sent word that it had been spoiled and there was no time to make another. The chief cook stormed and tore his hair. Perfection was his aim, and what would all the delicacies he had prepared avail without the georgeous centerpiece?

A boy who served as scullion advanced and said in a timid voice:

"If you will let me, I think I can make you something that will do in place of the confectionery piece."

"You, Antonio? What do you know about fashionable things?"

"I have worked in the yard of my grandfather, Pisano, the stonecutter."

"Nonsense! A stonecutter knows nothing about artistic work."

The boy begged hard, and as there was nothing else to be done he was given permission to try his hand. He sent for some butter and fashioned it into a crouching lion. It was placed upon the table, and soon after the princes, the merchants and the art critics were ushered into the dining room. The chief cook wore a melancholy look, keeping his eye fixed on what he considered a blemish to an otherwise splendid table. The guests ranged themselves around the table and took seats.

The cook saw one of the art critics looking fixedly at the butter lion, and the poor man inwardly cursed the moment that he had consented to use the scullion's work. Then he noticed that the art critic said something to the man sitting next to him, and they both looked at the lion. The chief cook's knees trembled beneath him. Surely his master would discharge him for putting this fierce looking creature that was made of such soft material before these great men. He had hoped they would not especially notice it, and already two of them were looking at it and talking about it. But when several other groups laid down their spoons, neglecting the soup that had cost the chef so much pains and began to stare at the centerpiece he was in despair.

"Signor Faliero," said the man who had first noticed the lion, "we are not surprised at your munificence in gracing your table with a work of genius but we are at a loss to know how you obtained the services of one who should consent to place the expression of his genius in so perishable a substance as butter."

The host looked at the lion, then inquiringly at the chief cook. The latter had become so confused over the outcome of his substitution of a few pounds of butter for a splendid candy centerpiece that he did not hear or did not understand what the guest had said. He broke down and confessed his culpable folly.

"Signor," he said tremulously, "pardon my iniquity. Just before the dinner was ready the confectioner sent word that he had spoiled the splendid candy centerpiece I had ordered and which would have been in every way worthy of your noble guests. When I was in great distress at this mishap Antonio, the scullion, came to me and offered to make something to fill its place. In an evil hour I listened to him. If you and your noble guests will forgive me I will remove the blemish.'

For a moment there was a hush of astonishment about the table; then the guest that had spoken, an eminent art critic, said to the chief cook:

"Do you mean to tell me that the lion was fashioned by a scullion and shortly before dinner?"

"Yes, signor. He begged so hard"—

"Signors," said the critic, "one of the world's greatest geniuses has been born!"

"The boy, the boy! Let us see the boy!" cried the guests.

"Send him in," said the host to the cook.

The mystified servant retired and in a few minutes returned, bringing with him the scullion.

"Signors," said the host, "this is—Boy, what's your name?"

"Antonio Canova," said the astonished boy.

Then the critic, rising, held forth his wineglass and said:

"Antonio Canova, I drink to an artist. Gentlemen, drink with me to Antonio Canova. May his genius grow constantly brighter."

The guests rose and drank the toast, while the astonished boy stared at them as if he had suddenly come under the influence of enchantment. Then his host told him that his scullion work was ended. He had resolved to be responsible for the boy's education.

The promise was kept. The works afterward achieved by the great sculptor are curious not only for their intrinsic value, but that they came from such a small beginning. It is a remarkable fact that the beautiful marble "Cupid and Psyche," the delight of all civilized mankind, should have been produced by one who was once a scullion.

THE GOORALS OF POLAND.

Honest, Hospitable and Brave, but Obstinate and Quarrelsome.

The character of the goorals has nothing in common with the humble peasants of the low country. In their good qualities and faults they rather resemble the proud noblemen of Poland. They are vivacious, honest, hospitable and full of pride, bravery and chivalry, on which one may always count. But their defects are grave. Obstinacy and quarrels lead them often to bloody fights, the lack of thrift is frequent among them and superstitions haunt them at every step. They love nature and in their songs praise their gigantic peaks, spruce forests and the clouds and rain. They build their houses facing Tatra, which they constantly observe and consult about weather conditions. A gooral cannot live without his mountains, and if he sometimes leaves them homesickness will soon bring him back.

They are very religious, but their Christian faith is mixed with old superstitions, and the Roman Catholic rites are mingled with weird, often very picturesque, usages which have their origin in the old Slavonic paganism. So, for instance, on St. John's night Sobotka is celebrated by burning bonfires on fields and hills and by dancing, a festivity which in pagan times was held on the summer solstice in honor of Sviatovit, the god of sun, fire and love.

On Easter holidays from every house various kinds of food are brought into the church to be blessed by the priest, or the priest, accompanied by a sexton, goes to the house, where on a long, white covered table cake, eggs and venison await his blessing. This is called swiocone. The table remains covered with food for a week to await all friends of the house that may come.

The Polish tongue among the mountaineers has pleasant, soft inflections, and their dialect resembles the old Polish of the fifteenth or sixteenth century. The picturesque and practical costume of the goorals consists of a course linen shirt fastened with a brass brooch; a serdak, which is a sleeveless sheepskin jacket of a reddish color, richly decorated with applique ornaments of colored leather and silk embroidery and lined with fur; tight fitting trousers of coarse, whitish, homemade woolen cloth, and a cloak called tsuba, worn usually over one shoulder. A black felt hat shaped like a mushroom and soft leather sandals (perpce) complete a costume that weighs from thirty-five to thirty-eight pounds, but is a good protection against cold and the rain which in these regions is frequent, for twenty days in a month are at least drizzly.—W. T. Benda in Century.

Fort Saratoga.

With the history of Old Saratoga the names of Schuyler and Livingston are closely associated. Fort Saratoga was built in 1690 by Major Peter Philip Schuyler, and around it grew up a small settlement which suffered many vicissitudes during the troublous times of the next hundred years. Lying on the thoroughfare from Canada to New York, this northern valley of the Hudson was always in dispute in the French and Indian war, and in the Revolution until the great battle of Saratoga—the first victory over which the American flag waved, and one of the fifteen decisive battles of the world. The actual battleground is several miles away from the settlement and is marked today by many stones recording the brave deeds of our American soldiers. The house still stands in which Arnold was confined as prisoner and from which he escaped in time to help turn the tide of battle toward victory.—Four Track News.

A Too Familiar Snake.

Seeing snakes is a common experience with the inhabitants of India and one unconnected with any suggestions of bibulousness. An English nurse tells of a little boy who lived in the next bungalow to hers and had his bread and milk every day on the veranda sitting in a child's high chair. One morning, hearing him talking and crowing to himself apparently, she was paralyzed on looking out to see him gently tapping the head of a cobra with his spoon, saying, "Naughty, naughty!" The snake was drinking the milk out of the bowl, paying no heed to the child. In that mysterious country the snakes may be heard rustling across the verandas and have an untidy habit of shedding their skins anywhere.

He Showed the Way.

On the 16th of August, 1807, Colonel Michel Ney, duke of Elchingen, having received orders to charge, turned to his men and shouted to them in a voice of thunder:

"My lads, I have an income of 300,000 francs, and you haven't a farthing. Keep your eye on your colonel as he charges, and do as he does."

So saying, he rode off as hard as he could tear in the direction of the enemy. The whole regiment followed him as though electrified.

Modern Cannon.

In modern high velocity cannon the pressure of the gases at the moment of firing generates tremendous heat. It is estimated that this heat runs as high as 8,000 degrees and even 9,000 degrees. The white hot gases eat away the steel lining of the guns in much the same way as streams of boiling water eat away a block of ice.

A Puzzler.

Johnnie—Pa, equine is a horse, isn't it? Father—Yes. Johnnie—And cow is a kind of an ox, isn't it? Father—Yes, a sort of an ox. Johnnie—Than what is an equinox?—Philadelphia Record.

Politeness is a coin destined to enrich those who give it away.

A cure endorsed by thousands.
Read an old man's tribute.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything, and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the daytime, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful, and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

The Park Stock Co.

Amid bright lights, applause and an occasional blast from an adjourning mill, the Park Dramatic Co. last night produced "Human Hearts" in four acts. It seems down in Arkansas there lived a blacksmith and he was healthy though single. He pounded the anvil every day until a lady from New York came along with a blue parasol and a record, also a classic chin. Her clothes fitted her, Joe took notice, he neglected his anvil and the trouble began. She married him because she liked the haze of the Ozark hills. Just then a gentleman in jaunty attire, arrived. He longed to kill her husband and feared if he didn't he would be nervous all day, and he did, right in the back, but it was the wrong man. Joe went to prison, but returned to find his little girl, the fruits of his early efforts, and with a bright new 38 colts, placed those who had injured him down among the flowers on the carpet. He paused to look at her, the mill sounded the signal for the 11 o'clock shift and all was still. It is a good play, well acted by a good company. Tonight "A Runaway Match"—a farce comedy full of action and especially suited to the spirit of Saturday night. Au revoir Mr. Park, come again.

A New Coal Town.

The Pryor Coal company, whose stockholders are all Westmoreland county capitalists, has began preliminary work on the construction of a coal town near Avella, in Independent township Washington county. The company recently secured several thousand acres of coal land along the Wabash railroad and will develop it at once It is the intention of the owners to erect a town for the accomodation of several thousand people.

MAY ASSIST VETERANS

Junior Mechanics Have Been Invited to Entertain Members of the Ringold Cavalay.

A joint meeting of the committees representing the Ringold cavalry and Star of the Valley Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. of Monongahela was held in the office of J. M. Sutmann last evening, looking toward the entertainment of the veterans who will meet in Monongahela on the 29th of August, to celebrate the annual reunion of the regiment. The cavalry veterans of this famous command have solicited the support of the Juniors for this occasion, and the meeting of the committee last evening was for the purpose of ascertaining just what would be expected of that organization.

After giving an outline for the plans of the reunion, the matter was discussed informally and it was then decided by the Junior's committee to report back to their council next Tuesday evening, when in all probability favorable action will be taken in the matter. It is the hope of the Ringold boys in Monongahela and vicinity to make this reunion a memorable one, as it is hardly probable that another will ever be held in the city by this regiment. Members of other organizations will be invited to take part, among them being a number of Confederate veterans from the Virginia valleys.

THEY DID IT UP BROWN.

Newly Married Druggist, Hand Cart, Brass Band and Red Fire are Principles in Lively Parade.

Yesterday afternoon R. W. Litzinger the druggist who was recently married to Miss Laura Kemp, a popular young lady of Baltimore brought his bride home No one knew of their coming and consequently there was no one to meet them at the depot but the many friends of the newly married couple were not to be put off so easily.

Last evening about 7.30 o'clock Mr. Litzinger in answer to a rap on the door was informed that "the boys" desired a setting up of accounts and before he knew what was going on he was pushed into a large hand cart and the procession headed by a band and with torches and red fire in abundance, paraded the principle streets Several times did his tormentors stop and the luckless groom was called on to address the crowd which under the circumstances he did in a very satisfactory manner. After their appitite for fun had been appeased "the bunch" tacked "23" on the hand cart and seating R. W. astride a board bore him back to to his home while the band played "How Sore I am."

Mr. Litzinger was then left to ruminate ruminations after "the gang" had wished him and his wife a long and happy life.

PIANO BUYING MADE EASY.

Prices and Terms within the Reach of Everybody.

THE MAMMOTH CLEARANCE SALE.

Of the A. H. Furlong and J. C. Donahue Stocks Breaking All Records in Piano Selling--Will Only Last a Few Days Longer. A. H. Furlong's Old Stand, 407 Fallowfield Avenue, Charleroi. W. F. Frederick.

As time goes on interest increases in this special sale of pianos.

Those who have bought during the sale are sending their friends and neighbors to do likewise. It is truly a revelation to piano buyers and many marvel at the great bargains we are giving. In fact, we believe a word of explanation would be appreciated by many. Not alone did we buy out the stocks of Mr. A. H. Furlong and Mr J. C. Donahue at our own figures but we were also fortunate in securing a large number of fine instruments from several different manufacturers who had carloads of pianos ready for their San Francisco agents at the time of the earthquake, and which of course could not be used at that point.

Altogether about 100 pianos were set aside for this special sale and the way they are being sold is conclusive evidence that this is an opportunity that shrewd buyers and money savers cannot afford to miss.

Do not think that the prices are too low for the instruments to be good. Remember that it all depends upon what an article can be bought for as to the price it should sell at. The way that W. F. Frederick buys pianos is entirely out of the ordinary. He has his own way of buying and no manufacturer no matter what great instrument, can get him to change his plans, yet he buys and sells annually, more pianos than any three factories can produce. When you take into consideration the fact that he buys only for cash and in large quantities at a time, you will readily see that he can command much lower figures than the average dealer.

In this sale which is now in progress, profits are not being considered. We believe it will pay us in future business to give 100 purchasers along the Monongahela valley the benefit of our buying power and have just that many staunch friends and supporters We are selling quite a large number of pianos every day and it will only take a very short time to dispose of this stock. Every piano is marked in plain figures showing their regular selling price and their special sale price

Some of the $250 and $300 pianos are marked as low as $117 and $133, $400 or $500 pianos at $197 to $275 All at big discounts. Many at less than former half prices. You do not have to pay the cash, we will make terms of payment agreeable to your circumstances We will also take old instruments in exchange at their true value. It is advisable not to delay too long in making your selection. No instruments will be duplicated of these prices when the sale is over. Store open evenings.

The police authorities of Greensburg, are mystified over the disappearance of Margaret Sheedy, aged 18, who left her home last Thursday on an errand. Last Thursday afternoon she left home without her hat. That night she did not return and the police were notified.
